 H.E. Monsignor Sarkis Davidian
 Msgr. Patrick Valdrini
 Rev. Laurent Basanese
 Rev. Diego Sarrio Cucarella
 Rev. Dr. David Marshall
 Dr. Ghada Shbeir
 Sister Nora Ishoui
 Sister Rachel Youkhaneh

In the inaugural session, in addition to the opening remarks by Dr. Turkaman and Cardinal Ayuso Guixot, a talk was given by Ayatollah Abolghasem Alidoust Abarghouei, Faculty Member of the Islamic Research Institute for Culture and Thought on "Human Fraternity".

The participants focused on the theme: "Christians and Muslims: Serving humanity together" from the viewpoints of Shia Islam and Catholicism. Papers were presented on the following subthemes:

1. Promoting individual rights and duties: Muslim and Christian Perspectives
2. Serving together the family and the education of the youth: Christian and Muslim Perspectives
3. Serving together in society: Muslim and Christian Perspectives
4. Serving together in the international community: Christian and Muslim Perspectives.

At the end of the meeting, the participants agreed on the following:

- 1 – Service to others, especially the sick, the poor and the needy, is of capital importance to Christians and Muslims. In addition, serving others witnesses to the universal love of God for all human beings, because He created everyone and everything, and cares for all His creation with the same love.
- 2 – Service to humanity requires treatment of all human beings without discrimination across the world. All individuals, all communities and all nations should be treated with a sense of humanity, including in situations of war or under international sanctions.
- 3 – Muslims and Christians, along with all persons of good will who do not profess any particular religion, are called to promote fundamental human rights for everybody, everywhere, at all times. Freedom of conscience and of religion is the cornerstone of the edifice of human rights and therefore should be persevered and promoted.
- 4 – Duties are inseparable from rights. Therefore, every person and group, while defending their rights, should also do their best to fulfil their duties towards their families, communities and societies.
- 5 – The formation of young people as both sincere believers and responsible citizens is of essential importance for religions and states alike. It is on families that the primary responsibility for this formation of young people falls; they thus have the right to be supported in this responsibility by the whole of society.
- 6 – A particular and urgent service to humanity today is the custody of creation, taking into consideration in particular climate change and the environmental crisis. This endeavor requires the collaboration of all believers and people of good will.

The Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue expressed profound gratitude to the Center for Interreligious &

Intercultural Dialogue and to the Islamic Culture and Relations Organization for their warm welcome and generous hospitality.

The participants decided to hold the next colloquium in Rome in 2021, to be preceded by a preparatory meeting in 2020.
