Decree of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments giving effect to the dispositions of canon 838 of the Code of Canon Law

DECREE

giving effect to the dispositions of can. 838

of the Code of Canon Law

INTRODUCTION

Following the promulgation of Pope Francis' Motu Proprio Magnum Principium, with which the norms of §§ 2 and 3 of can. 838 of the C.I.C. were changed, it is necessary that whatever is found to the contrary in the Institutiones generales and in the Prænotanda of the liturgical books, as well as in the Instructions, Declarations, and Notifications published by this Dicastery according to the old norms of §§ 2 and 3 of can. 838 of the C.I.C. 1983, be corrected.[1] This is especially true for the Institutio generalis Missalis Romani 2002 and 2008, for the Praenotanda of the second editions of the De Ordinatione Episcopi, presbyterorum et diaconorum, of the Ordo celebrandi Matrimonium and of the editions of the De Exorcismis and of the Martyrologium Romanum. It also applies in a particular way to the Instructions Varietates legitimæ and Liturgiam authenticam. It must also be taken into account that whatever is said in the Decrees of promulgation of the individual liturgical books whenever reference is made to the authority or juridical competence of the Episcopal Conferences and of this Dicastery regarding adaptations and translations of texts in vernacular languages must be interpreted according to the letter and mind of the new canon 838.[2]

In line with the aforementioned Motu Proprio, the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments has considered it its duty to interpret and, as far as necessary, clarify the liturgical laws that it has issued on this matter, so that it may "help the Episcopal Conferences to fulfil their task as well as working to promote ever more the liturgical life of the Latin Church".

Therefore, in accord with the mind of the Motu Proprio, the first part of the present Decree reiterates, interprets and amends the norms, the discipline, and the procedures regarding the translation of liturgical books and their adaptation. It does so in particular with regard to the competence of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments and of the Episcopal Conferences. The second part indicates some "variations", following those already published in 1983,[3] to be introduced in the new editions of liturgical books.

I

NORMS AND PROCEDURES

1. The liturgical books intended for the celebration of the liturgy were reformed by the authority of the Supreme Pontiffs Pope Saint Paul VI and Pope Saint John Paul II, who decreed their publication and their obligatory nature for the Roman Rite. They contain the biblical readings, the prayers of the Church, the chants to be performed and other texts. They also include the Institutiones generales and the Praenotanda,[4] which set out the theology, spirituality, offices and principles of pastoral care, structure and discipline of each celebration. These books, composed in Latin,[5] convey the tradition which, per ritus et preces, expresses the faith of the Church.[6] Therefore, their content is not the patrimony of an individual or a particular group of the faithful, since it manifests the prayer and life of the whole Church.

2. The liturgical books of the Roman Rite in Latin are promulgated in editio typica by the Apostolic See, which holds their copyright.[7] The "concordat cum originali" is certified by the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments. For subsequent editions (aliae editiones necnon editiones emendatae vel auctae) the same principle applies. They can be used as soon as they are published, normally by the Tipografia Vaticana, and they are distributed by the Libreria Editrice Vaticana.

3. In order to print or reprint these Latin books for liturgical use (editio typica vel iuxta typicam), a licence must be obtained from the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments each time. For editiones iuxta typicam, publishers must also enter into a contract with the Amministrazione del Patrimonio della Sede Apostolica or, on its behalf, with the Libreria Editrice Vaticana. Similar permissions are also required for the distribution of liturgical books or parts thereof via the internet.[8]

4. In reforming the liturgical books of the Roman Rite, in accordance with the provisions of the Second Vatican Council, the need for their translation into spoken languages and their adaptation to the cultural diversity of peoples was kept in mind, as were the problems inherent in such work. In this regard, it should not be forgotten that:
  - a) the translations of the liturgical texts, being part of the rites themselves, are the voice of the Church which celebrates the divine mysteries, and they have the same value as the liturgical texts in Latin.[9] They must therefore strive to become "liturgical" languages and, despite their diversity, always maintain the one and the same voice of the Church, the one and the same "lex orandi". Therefore, the translations of the liturgical books cannot be left to the judgement of individuals but, entrusted to the responsibility of the Bishops, must be approved by their Conferences;

  - b) for the pastoral benefit of the faithful, in addition to the adaptations already provided for in the liturgical books, which are the responsibility of the celebrant, there are also other types of necessary or useful adaptations which are left to the decision and approval of the Conferences of Bishops.

5. "according to what is stated in the Constitution Sacrosanctum Concilium, in particular in articles 36 §§ 3-4, 40 and 63 and in the Apostolic Letter Motu Proprio Sacram Liturgiam, n. IX",[10] the Motu Proprio Magnum Principium has modified the canonical norms in such a way that "the competency of the Apostolic See surrounding the translation of liturgical books and the more radical adaptations established and approved by Episcopal Conferences be made clearer, among which can also be numbered eventual new texts to be inserted into these books".[11] Consequently, "the right and duty of Episcopal Conferences" is also clarified, facilitating fraternal "collaboration ... between the Apostolic See and Episcopal Conferences"[12] regarding the publication of liturgical books in current languages.

6. As a consequence of the Motu Proprio, a renewed interpretation of the applicable norms issued so far about adaptations and translations for the liturgy is necessary. It should be borne in mind, however, that “the criteria indicated were and remain at the level of general guidelines and, as far as possible, must be followed by Liturgical Commissions as the most suitable instruments”.[13]

7. The present decree contains guidelines and prescriptions concerning the competencies of both the Episcopal Conferences and the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments. The acts of recognitio and confirmatio, described in numbers 43 and 45, are necessary to give full effect to the decisions of the Episcopal Conferences and manifest the communion that binds the Roman Pontiff with the Bishops.[14]

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COMPETENCIES OF THE EPISCOPAL CONFERENCES

8. In light of can. 838 §§ 2 and 3, it is for the Episcopal Conference to publish the liturgical books, bearing in mind that they contain translations of the original Latin texts and the adaptations already provided for in those same books, which require confirmatio; there may also be a more radical adaptation (cf. SC n. 40) which is not indicated in the typical liturgical books and which therefore requires recognitio.

For both the confirmatio and the recognitio the procedure for approval by the Episcopal Conference will take place in accordance with can. 455 § 2 of the C.I.C.

The Episcopal Conference approves the adaptations of the liturgical books according to the norm of law (cf. can. 838 § 2)

9. The more radical adaptation of the Roman Rite (cf. SC n. 40), while always safeguarding the substantial unity attested to in the typical liturgical books, is motivated by cultural factors (ritual practices, symbols, gestures) and not by other reasons; in point of fact, this is called the “inculturation” of the Roman Rite.[15] In other words, it is a matter of expressing ritually, through a typology of gestures and symbols, the same content expressed by the traditional gestures and symbols of the Roman Rite. There are also other cases of adaptation, such as Particular Calendars[16] or particular texts suggested by pastoral necessity.

10. The Bishops’ Conference assesses and approves any adaptations to be made that are not indicated in the editio typica, including the formulation of new texts.[17] The study of these adaptations is entrusted to the Episcopal Liturgy Commission, which, in consultation with the Episcopal Commission for the Doctrine of the Faith, may avail itself of the collaboration of experts.[18] The President of the Episcopal Conference then presents the acts of the Bishops’ decisions, along with an explanatory report on the choices made and the process followed in the light of the current provisions, to the Apostolic See for the required recognitio.[19]

11. Any adaptations concerning one or more areas of a country require the approval of the Episcopal Conference. This allows a broader and more far-sighted evaluation of particular choices.

12. After obtaining the recognitio these more radical adaptations form part of the liturgical books of a given Episcopal Conference, and must be printed with a typographical indication which shows that they are proper to said Conference. Therefore, they cannot be adopted in the books of another Episcopal Conference, without the latter in turn approving them and requesting the recognitio of the Apostolic See.

The Bishops’ Conference prepares translations of the liturgical books in vernacular languages and approves them, requesting confirmation before publication (cf. can. 838 § 3)

- Language

13. The preparation of the translation of liturgical books presupposes an evaluative framework that first of all takes into account the language,[20] its characteristics and its diffusion, with an eye to the near future of its use, beginning with its use by younger generations. The adoption of vernacular languages in the liturgy must, among other things, take into account that the fundamental criterion is the participation of the people in the liturgical celebrations and not other types of considerations, such as social issues or issues related to identity.

14. It is for the Bishops' Conference to decide which language or languages to adopt in the liturgy for the area of its competence, assessing whether and how the process of translating all or some of the typical liturgical books, the whole book or only those parts of it that are more directly necessary or useful to encourage the participation of the people in the liturgy, is feasible. [21]

15. A basic prerequisite is the existence of a version of the Bible in a given language, approved by the Bishops' Conference.[22] The texts of Sacred Scripture are in fact the primary and essential source of the liturgy,[23] indispensable for the formation of a liturgical language.[24]

16. The decision of the Episcopal Conference regarding the adoption and use of a given language in the liturgy is presented to the Apostolic See for the required confirmatio,[25] without which the work of translation should not be undertaken.

- The translation process

17. The experience of recent years has taught us that the work of translating biblical and liturgical texts is a complex task. Since the main responsibility in this matter lies with the Bishops, the Episcopal Conference must take on this task directly,[26]with the necessary collaboration of suitable persons, including experts trained in the translation of liturgical Latin, and with the help of suitable resources,[27] including the preparation of a ratio translationis and a dictionary for non-biblical liturgical expressions.

18. The Episcopal Liturgy Commission plays a decisive role.[28] Bishops, who are responsible for decision-making, should use a stable group of experts to ensure that there is continuity in the work. In order to guarantee that the correct and integral expression of the faith of the Catholic Church in a given language is transmitted according to her teaching and with the appropriate vocabulary, there is a clear need for the opinion of the Episcopal Commission for the Doctrine of the Faith. The final decisions are taken by the Episcopal Conference, a body which allows all the Bishops, who have the right to vote, to share their task as teachers of the people of God, for liturgical prayer is the clearest manifestation of what the Church believes and is obliged to believe.

19. Indeed, "the goal of the translation of liturgical texts and of biblical texts for the Liturgy of the Word is to announce the word of salvation to the faithful in obedience to the faith and to express the prayer of the Church to the Lord. For this purpose it is necessary to communicate to a given people using its own language all that the Church intended to communicate to other people through the Latin language. While fidelity cannot always be judged by individual words but must be sought in the context of the whole communicative act and according to its literary genre, nevertheless some particular terms must also be considered in the context of the entire Catholic faith because each translation of texts must be congruent with sound doctrine".[29]

20. Can. 838, § 3 requires the Episcopal Conferences to "faithfully prepare versions of the liturgical books in vernacular languages". The adverb faithfully implies a threefold fidelity: firstly to the original text, secondly to the particular language into which it is translated and finally to the comprehension of the text by the addressees who are introduced to the vocabulary of biblical revelation and liturgical tradition.

21. Faithfulness above all to the original text, i.e. in Latin, found in the typical liturgical books of the Roman Rite. Since this is a translation it is to be understood that the Latin text always serves as a reference point in case of doubt as to the correct meaning. Secondly, it cannot be ruled out that a version of the liturgical texts in a more widespread language already confirmed by the Apostolic See can also be used as an interpretative aid.

22. Faithfulness then to the language into which the translation is made, since each language has its own characteristics. The accuracy of the translation consists in combining respect for the character of each language while rendering "the meaning of the original Latin text ... fully and faithfully".[30]

23. Finally, fidelity to comprehension of the text on the part of the addressees and to their “spiritual needs”,[31] bearing in mind that “because the liturgical text is a ritual sign it is a means of oral communication”.[32] The work of translation also requires that attention be paid to different literary genres (presidential prayers, acclamations, hymns, monitions, etc.) as well as to the fact that there are texts intended for proclamation, for listening to, for choral recitation. It is evident that liturgical language - the terms, elements and signs - needs to be explained in catechesis in the light of Sacred Scripture and Christian tradition.

24. The translation covers the entire book, including documents such as the Constitutiones Apostolicae, Institutiones, Praenotanda. If there are reasons that might suggest proceeding by parts, especially in relation to the Missal, with its Lectionary, and the Liturgy of the Hours, it is necessary to bear in mind the internal coherence of the book and the use of the same criteria followed in the translation of vocabulary and rubrical terminology.

25. Particular attention should be paid to the translation of the most important liturgical texts. These are the relevant texts, according to the principle “lex orandi – lex credendi”: the Ordo Missae,[33] and in particular the Eucharistic Prayers,[34] the Profession of Faith, and the Oratio dominica. Even the responses of the faithful and the common acclamations, often inspired by texts from Sacred Scripture, are expressions that need careful translation in order to promote their stability over time and avoid constant changes. Sacramental formulas are approved by the Holy Father alone.[35]

26. When a language is spoken in several countries, without a doubt it is desirable to adopt the same translation, especially for important liturgical texts.[36] The hope, consistently reiterated over the years, is that translations of liturgical texts in the same language will be prepared with the cooperation of all the concerned Bishops’ Conferences.

27. To this end, it is useful to make use of mixed commissions,[37] i.e. made up of Bishops delegated by their respective Episcopal Conferences, who can avail themselves of the collaboration of experts from various countries. These Commissions are set up by the Presidents of the Episcopal Conferences and work according to a Statute (composition, competencies, functions) agreed upon by the Episcopal Conferences themselves. The Apostolic See can act as a mediator super partes in order to promote agreement and understanding. The texts prepared by these Commissions must be evaluated and approved by the individual Episcopal Conferences, and then presented to the Apostolic See by their respective Presidents for confirmatio.

- The drafting of the liturgical book and its approval

28. A liturgical book contains translations of biblical texts, eucological texts and chants, as well as any adaptations that have or have not been provided for in the typical Latin editions.

29. According to the norms in force the biblical texts for liturgical use are taken from the translation of Sacred Scripture duly approved by the Episcopal Conference.[38] The biblical pericopes and their arrangement in the Lectionaries, including the accompanying apparatus, must correspond to the order indicated in the typical books.[39]

30. The translation of the eucological texts must be duly approved by the Episcopal Conference in accordance with established procedures.[40]

31. The proper liturgical chants are those indicated in the typical liturgical books. Other chants/hymns, provided they are appropriate in terms of text, liturgical function and congruence with the day and time, must be approved by the Episcopal Conference.[41]

32. Choices, provided for in the typical editions, regarding adaptations within the competence of the Episcopal Conference must also be duly approved by the same Conference.[42]

33. At the end of the evaluation process adaptations which are not provided for in the liturgical books must be duly approved by the Conference of Bishops according to the established procedures.[43]

- The request for "confirmatio" and "recognitio" from the Apostolic See

34. The translation of a liturgical book, approved by the Episcopal Conference, is sent for confirmatio to the Apostolic See with a letter signed by the President and the Secretary of the Episcopal Conference, accompanied by the acts relating to the canonical vote, together with two copies of the text, to which is also attached the text in electronic format, and a report on the work done and the choices made.[44] In accordance with the Statutes of the individual Episcopal Conferences, the same rule also applies to the translation of new texts for inclusion in a liturgical book.

35. Whenever the Episcopal Conference considers it useful to make changes or corrections in the liturgical book, as well as to revise it for the purpose of a new edition, it is necessary to follow the procedure described in the previous paragraph.

36. The same procedure applies to the request for recognitio.

- The publication of the liturgical book

37. Once the confirmatio and recognitio of the Apostolic See have been obtained, the liturgical book is promulgated by a decree signed by the President and the Secretary of the Episcopal Conference. This also applies in the case of a liturgical book translated into a language of only one area of the country.

38. In the initial pages the printed liturgical book must reproduce the decrees of the Apostolic See and the Episcopal Conference in their language of promulgation, as well as the "concordat cum originali" of the President of the Episcopal Commission for Liturgy or, where this does not exist, of the President of the Conference itself, and the imprimatur according to the norm of law.[45]

39. The reprinting of the liturgical book shall incorporate any textual updates and variations that have previously received the due confirmatio or recognitio of the Apostolic See; such acts shall be mentioned at the beginning of the book.

40. The copyright of books and liturgical texts in vernacular languages is held by the Bishops' Conference. In the case of the adoption of the same texts by another Episcopal Conference, the rights will be established in writing between the Episcopal Conferences concerned.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COMPETENCIES OF THE CONGREGATION FOR DIVINE WORSHIP AND THE DISCIPLINE OF THE SACRAMENTS

41. In the light of canon 838 §§ 2 and 3, with a view to publishing liturgical books in vernacular languages, it is the responsibility of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments to review (recognoscere) the adaptations approved according to the norm of law by the Episcopal Conference, and to confirm (confirmare) the translations of the texts duly approved by the Episcopal Conferences.

- The "recognitio"

42. After their approval by the Episcopal Conference, the process concerning adaptations not provided for in the typical liturgical books requires the recognitio of the Apostolic See, granted by decree of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments. Since these are ritual elements and particular texts, the recognitio demands their congruity with the Roman Rite, in order to safeguard its substantial unity and conformity with the Catholic faith.[46]

43. Therefore, the recognitio consists of a review by the Apostolic See of what has been approved by the Episcopal Conference for its territory, and of the legitimacy of the iter which has been followed, taking into account the reasons dictated by the culture,[47] and tradition of a country[48] and by pastoral needs.[49]

44. Taking into account the positive and negative aspects learned from experience in regard to adaptations “ad interim” or “ad experimentum”, the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments will ensure that the timescales, criteria and evaluation of these adaptations are respected, in order to arrive at a stable resolution.

- The “confirmatio”

45. The “confirmatio” consists in the ratification given by the Apostolic See to the translation of biblical and liturgical texts, after having ascertained the legitimacy of the approval procedure followed by the Episcopal Conferences for the various aspects involved. That is the adoption and extension of a given language in the liturgy, the criteria for translation, the integrity of the texts with respect to the typical liturgical books and their correspondence with them, the implementation of the choices already indicated in the liturgical books that are the responsibility of the Episcopal Conferences.

46. With regard to Lectionaries, the confirmatio consists of verifying that the biblical pericopes and their apparatus correspond to the ordering of the typical liturgical books of the Roman Rite.

47. As regards the translation of sacramental formulas, according to current norms, confirmatio is granted after approval by the Holy Father alone.[50]

48. In the case of lacunae in the translation as well as the need for clarification of important texts (cf. above n. 25) and particular liturgical formulas, such as e.g. the prayers of ordination, dedication, consecration, exorcism formulas, the greetings of the priest and the responses of the faithful, acclamations inspired by Sacred Scripture and some particular terms to be understood within the faith of the Church,[51] the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments shall dialogue with the Episcopal Conference in order to develop a solution in light of their respective competencies.

49. When it comes to translations into a language common to several Episcopal Conferences, the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments shall dialogue with those Conferences in order to obtain an agreed solution, at least for the sacramental formulas, the responses of the faithful and for those texts that are doctrinally and pastorally important.

PROBERS OF DIOCESES AND RELIGIOUS FAMILIES

50. Although canon 838 does not concern the particular liturgical texts of Dioceses and Religious Families, this matter requires normative adjustment as it is tightly bound up with the liturgical books. In this regard:

1) dioceses, institutes of consecrated life, societies of apostolic life and others with a particular right have: a Particular Calendar, a Proper of Masses and Liturgy of the Hours, as well as a Martyrology;[52]

2) for Religious Families the adaptation of the Ordo Professionis Religiosae[53] and other particular celebrations is also anticipated.

51. Proper celebrations are to be harmoniously integrated into the General Roman Calendar. The diocesan liturgical calendar shall take into account national and regional calendars. All particular Calendars, composed by the competent authority, must be approved by the Apostolic See.[54]

52. By analogy with the norm of canon 838 § 2, the competent authority (the Bishop, the Superior or the Superior General) is responsible for drawing up the particular Calendar and the Proper[55], and then, since they are new texts, submits them for recognitio, in Latin or a vernacular language, to the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments; for liturgical texts in honour of new Blessed, at least the Latin Collect is required[56].

With regard to biblical texts, the version of Sacred Scripture duly approved by the Episcopal Conference is to be adopted in the Proper.

As for other liturgical texts, especially eucological texts, the criteria of composition are those that govern the current liturgical books. According to the rank of celebration the Missale Romanum and the Liturgia Horarum are the model for the format and style of texts.

The arrangement of the texts of the Proper, including their apparatus, is modelled on the editions of the typical liturgical books published in the vernacular languages by the Episcopal Conferences.

53. After the iter envisaged for the revision or composition of the Particular Calendar and the Proper, the competent authority requests the recognitio from the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments.

The request must be accompanied by the texts to be approved, submitted in duplicate and in electronic format, together with a brief detailed report on the work carried out, including the reasons for any variation or inclusion of celebrations, in light of the latest approved Calendar and Proper and current norms.

54. Having obtained recognitio by decree of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments the texts of the Proper, in Latin or in another language, are to be considered typical; their translations into other languages are to be presented by the competent authority, accompanied by a brief report, to the same Congregation for confirmatio.

55. The Proper of Masses and Liturgy of the Hours of the dioceses and others who have that right does not constitute a liturgical book in itself, since it is added to the Roman Missal and the Liturgy of the Hours, on which it depends for the Ordinary and the Commons.[57]
